Gavin Steingo is Associate Professor and Director of Undergraduate Studies in the Department of Music at Princeton University, where he is also affiliated with the programs in Media and Modernity, African Studies, and Jazz Studies. His research examines sound and music as fundamental features in the construction of global modernity. Gavin has pursued these topics in a monograph, Kwaito's Promise: Music and the Aesthetics of Freedom in South Africa (University of Chicago Press, 2016, winner of the Alan P. Merriam Prize from the Society for Ethnomusicology), and through conversations with scholars across a broad spectrum of disciplines: a special issue of the journal boundary 2 co-edited with Jairo Moreno on the topic “Econophonia: Music, Value, and Forms of Life”; a co-edited book series (also with Jairo Moreno) exploring intersections of music and sound for Oxford University Press; and a volume (co-edited with Jim Sykes) on decolonizing sound studies from Duke University Press. Gavin’s book, Interspecies Communication, is forthcoming from the University of Chicago Press. He also composes music and plays guitar for the group Owen Lake and the Tragic Loves.